Intake for Family Mediation, Med-Arb or Arbitration

I am available to provide mediation, med-arb and arbitration services for people with family disputes. I provide these services as a neutral and I do not provide legal advice or represent parties in any family law proceedings. This intake form does not constitute a retainer agreement and written retainers are required by family dispute resolution professionals.

Please note that because of the nature of my work, I see people only by appointment and not on a drop-in basis.

If you are interested in further pursuing my services as a neutral please first check my website for a description of the services: www.paullovearbitrator.ca . There are resources in the links which can assist you, but are not a substitute for legal advice.

Screening: All participants in family dispute resolution are required to participate in intimate partner violence screening. This is required by the Family Law Act. In med-arb and arbitration matters I usually use another person as a screener to protect my independence in any decision making process.

Costs: There are costs to be screened for a family dispute resolution process. There are fees and disbursements that you will have to pay for my involvement.

Identification: You must bring two pieces of identification with you to any meeting with myself or the screener.
